Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negatived by the manner in which the invention was made.

Claims 1-5, 7-12 and 14-25 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Apikos (4,416,788).

Apikos discloses a transparent lubricating oil composition useful as a high severity metal cutting oil which comprises a major amount of oil of high lubricating viscosity of about 50 SUS to about 1000 SUS at 100°F and minor amounts of at least one sulfur-containing compound and an effective amount of elemental sulfur. See column 1, line 28 to column 2, line 45. Apikos teaches that the sulfur containing compound may be any suitable compound soluble in lubricating oil at 40°F and which acts in combination with elemental sulfur to improve the extreme pressure properties of the composition. See column 2, line 46 to column 3, line 33. Elemental sulfur may be added to the composition in an amount of about 0.1 to about 1.5% by weight. This amount of active sulfur includes the amount of active sulfur applicants added to the examples in the application of 1.4 weight % which results in a Falax Extreme Pressure Test value of 4500+ and a Falax Wear Test of zero. The elemental sulfur component of Apikos also acts to improve the extreme pressure properties of the composition. See column 3, lines 34-48. The composition may also comprise at least one ester component as a lubricity agent. The ester component may be present in the composition in an amount of about 0.1 to about 10% by weight and suitable ester components include well known vegetable and fatty oils. See column 4. line 38 to column 6, line 2. Apikos teaches that other ingredients such as corrosion and rust inhibitors may be added to the composition. See column 6, lines 3-9. Thus, the examiner is of the position that Apikos clearly meets the limitations of components a), b), and c) of the claims. Applicant's open-ended claim language "comprising" allows for the addition of other additives to the composition such as the sulfur-containing compound of the prior art. The claimed properties of a Falax reference load of greater than 4,500 pounds, a Falax reference wear of less than 10 teeth, and a certain copper strip corrosion classification value are seen to be inherent properties of the composition. Although such properties are not set forth in Apikos, Apikos teaches a lubricant composition comprising the same components and suitable for the same purpose as does applicant, that is, for use as an extreme pressure lubricant in heavy duty applications such as metal working.

Conclusion

Any inquiry concerning this communication or earlier communications from the examiner should be directed to Ellen M McAvoy whose telephone number is (703) 308-2510. The examiner can normally be reached on M-F (7:30-5:00) with alt. Fridays off.

If attempts to reach the examiner by telephone are unsuccessful, the examiner's supervisor, Glenn Caldarola can be reached on (703) 308-6824. The fax phone numbers for the organization where this application or proceeding is assigned are (703) 872-9310 for regular communications and (703) 872-9311 for After Final communications.
